Directions

Important information about a story can be gathered from photographs before you even begin to read the text.

Select a photo and paste it in the easel. Study the photo carefully before reading the text. List five things that you can infer from the photo. Inferences may be based on the setting, clothing, actions, facial expressions, age and ethnicity of the characters, and other objects in the picture.

Write a summary of the story told by the photograph.

Now, read the related story. Why do you think this picture was selected to go with the story?
